Washington, D. C., Dec. 1.—Organized labor's attitude toward many questions pending and likely to come before congress has been outlined by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, replying to questions submitted to labor leaders by chairman Hays of the Republican national committee.

To make the fruits of labor more effectively usable for the welfare of the country, Mr. Woll said, labor must be placed on an equal footing with capital. He rapped the injunction rule as a "labor law" and said it was "a violation of the right to free speech and free assembly."
